DisappointingBy Laszlo WagnerA new guidebook providing an overview of the dive sites of Indonesia has been long overdue, and I was excited to find this one.Unfortunately, my excitement was quickly replaced by disappointment, this guide barely scratches the surface.Two of the county's regions, Sumatra and Kalimantan are completely ignored, despite both having popular and great dive locations at Pulau Weh and the Sangalaki archipelago, respectively.In the regions covered, it also only covers a few areas, often not even the best and most popular ones. In Maluku for example it only covers Ambon and obscure Weda Bay (which is remote and only has a single dive resort) yet doesn't even mention much more accessible Saparua and the region's most coveted destination, the Banda Islands, despite both having had at least 2 dive operators for many years and having been well detailed in earlier guidebooks from 15 years ago already!The important diving areas missing from this book are also covered in the Indonesia chapter of the shorter and cheaper Diving SE Asia guide of the same publisher.Those areas that did get coverage don't get much of it either: the Ambon map shows and names 48 dive spots around that island, yet only 5 of these are actually described in the text.The practical advice, especially regarding the dive operators recommended, also leaves a lot to be desired: typically only one dive operator is recommended, invariably a Westerner-run one, the most expensive of all, with the existence of others not even mentioned.You will often find more info on dive areas and operators in the general Lonely Planet guide to Indonesia!Anything good to say?Well, it is pretty and nicely laid out, and for novices to Indonesian diving, it still gives an overview of the country's diversity.1 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Indonesia Scuba Diving Rocks !!By bobThe best, most up to date book for diving Indonesia that is perfect for the start of planning a dive trip to Indonesia. This book is much more than a compilation of internet website reviews and write ups. Sarah provides recommendations for locations, resorts and dive operators at several Indonesia dive destinations. The book is well organized, information is easy to find. Looking forward to her next book.1 of 2 people found the following review helpful. A really great book about environmental friendly resortsBy CustomerIt contains some of the world's best dive sites all in Indonesia and recommends Dive Resort which take care of their environment.Some of them i already know . The other resorts which were unknown to me i will go to and check them out. Since Indonesia is the best dive site in the world for me.Well done I wish there were more books like that!

"It looks great, a quality feel and the pictures make you really want to go there and dive. The perfect resource for those wanting to visit the area and choosing the right place for them and diving it safely." Deeper Blue blog"The book covers popular diving areas in Indonesia including Java, Bali, Sulawesi, Nusa Tenggara, Maluku and Raja Ampat. It includes a lot of information about different dive sites, liveaboards, marine life, best times to visit, dive operators, accommodation and other useful tips. The book has also good and detailed maps and beautiful pictures below the surface which makes you to want to book a dive trip right away :)" Scuba World"This highly informative and impressive collection of dive destinations and location details forms an invaluable tool in planning and in the diving of this area. The compact fact-packed paperback, with a protective cover, makes it an ideal and valuable traveling companion. This will be the only book I will need on my next adventure to Indonesia." On the Edge blog"A successful manual very well prepared and optically well designed!" Aquanaut magazineAbout the AuthorSarah Ann Wormald is from Ilkley, West Yorkshire in the UK where she previously worked as a Solicitor. Sarah began diving in 1999 in the Red Sea in Egypt and after having dived in numerous destinations around the world she moved to Indonesia in 2007. Since her move to Asia, Sarah has become a Instructor who has shared her passion with hundreds of students through teaching them how to explore the underwater world. When Sarah is not teaching she spends her time traveling Indonesia diving and photographing. From the outset of this project Sarah's aim was to promote operators who dive safely and who protect and care for the reefs around them. Sarah's interests in Indonesian reefs, marine life, adventure and exploration led her to begin working on this book in 2013. Sarah currently lives and works full time in Indonesia.
