By Carol Dwyer I am trying to help the Head to Head School near Jacmel in Haiti which had no map of Haiti. I liked your map of Haiti so much I bought 5 more copies to give to the Head to Head School and also other nearby schools in that area. I like the captions or notes of places of special historical interest. I would love to have a map that indicated the land uses (present, and historic.) It would be GREAT to have a map which indicated where the NGO's working in Haiti are located and - in what way. Maps are a great aid to education in so many ways.

By Samuel Clark DO NOT use this map if you plan to use it for any navigation. The road distinctions are inconsistent, the distances on the Haiti side are very unreliable. I biked from SDO to Jacmel, and could not have been more frustrated with the low quality of this map. In fact, I think the map producers need to pull this from their catalogue until they can generate more accurate information.

By Billy Bob Don't buy this map if you plan to use it for actual navigation in the DR. I love to use maps, so I feel very comfortable navigating with them. Roads are very complicated in the DR, and this map does not have enough detail to get you around. In fact, by following this map, we LOST an entire day of travel. It would look fine as a poster or as a general way to show someone the relative locations of cities and landmarks.

Double sided map on durable synthetic paper, suitable for tropical conditions. One side includes a travel map of the Dominican Republic 1:400,000 with name index and an inset of central Santo Domingo. The other side includes a travel map of Haiti 1:350,000 with name index and an inset of central Port-au-Prince.
