The nice thing about this map was that it has a protective coating and covers all of the moai sites on Easter Island. The thing I didn't like was its' size. I would have preferred a pocketbook format. This was a bit too big to slip into a pocket but it was a great resource in determining where you had been and where we were going. Since the moai themselves are scattered throughout the island; you do need to take a tour to get the most out of the experience. They gave us a map without as much detail but once back at the hotel were were able to get a better picture of our direction etc from this map. I would not call this a necessity for the trip but it was very informative.

This map worked very well for my travels around Easter Island. The only thing that I didn't like was it showed the locations of all the Moai even though most of the Moai depicted were in such a ruined state that they were not worth traveling too. My only suggestion is it would have been great to color code the Moai to give some sort of indication as to their current state.

This is the best map of Easter Island (Rapanui) that I was able to find anywhere, both online and offline. It has been extremely useful in planning my trip to Easter Island. It shows major and minor roads plus walking tracks, along with locations of statues etc. The perimeter of the map contains lots of useful historical and tourist information. I would not consider a trip to Easter Island without using this map for planning the trip and finding my way around once there.

Very detailed topographic map at the scale of 1:30,000 with relief showed by 20m contours, elevation tinting and spot heights for selected peaks. Map includes annotations with geographical and historical information. Icons show locations of Moai (stone statues), topknots (partial Moai), platforms, petroglyphs, accommodations, airport, post office, hospital, other points of interest, caves, potable water, craters, cliffs, wooded areas, roads, tracks, and trails. An ideal scale for exploring the island on foot.
