A wonderland of sky, water, grass, and birdsong, the Iber marshlands of Corrientes Province are the preeminent wildlife habitat in Argentina and a globally important natural treasure. Esteros del Iber, a landmark volume celebrating a peerless place, invites the reader to experience this spectacle of nature. One of the largest freshwater wetlands in South America, comprising more than 2.5 million acres, the Iber was forged from ancient geological forces and the long-ago wanderings of the mighty Paran River. Today the landscape is a locus of conservation activity including a campaign to create a new national park to protect the biodiversity of this striking region. Increasingly a destination for nature lovers, the marshlands attract birdwatchers from across the Earth, who come to see some 360 avian species that are found here. A native son of Corrientes, world-class nature photographer Juan Ramn Daz Colodrero has spent years documenting the regions birdlife and other wild creatures. In Esteros del Iber, his dazzling images put the reader into the heart of the Ibers life-affirming beauty. Supporting essays by leading regional conservationists and other experts illuminate the Ibers diverse natural communities and distinctive human culture. While the area is remarkably unspoiled, innovative conservation projects are augmenting wildlife populations and returning missing native species such as the giant anteater and the jaguar to their rightful homes in the landscape of shining waters. The Iber presents a stark contrast to the modern world, a place where the trajectory of land health is moving toward integrity and wildness.

About the Author Juan Ramon Diaz Colodrero uses his camera to get inside the magic world of nature and biodiversity, and thus contribute to the conservation of the natural beauties that the world holds. He has always been bound to nature, growing up in the wilderness, among trees, marshes and wildlife of Paraje Mora. Later, he moved to Europe, where he learned the art of wildlife photography from great photographers such as Juan Carlos Munoz, Javier Sanchez and Eduardo Blanco. For the last two years, he has lived at the Ibera Wetlands, where he found nature in its most wild form. Currently, he provides guiding services, logistics and accommodation at Ibera Wetlands.
